HITLER Sees Russian WAR WANTS RICH SIBERIA LAND

Sept. 12.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, with hundreds of Nazi warplanes, raining in aggressive tempo overhead, declared today Germany would be ever victorious, prospering. "I was told the rich agricultural lands and the ore-laden mountains of Soviet Russia."

Speaking before the "Folke Front" after he had told thousands of boys and girls that Germany would triumph over Russia ("If the hour ever comes" when there is war, the Führer announced).

"If I don't see the Reich, if we are not victorious, I will not be the Führer," the German leader declared, "I will not be the Führer."

200 Bombers Roar

As he spoke, 200 heavy bombers and hundreds of smaller planes whirled and soared above the Führer.

"I was only here a brief moment in my long career, however, but I have achieved a great victory."

Describing, for the first time, the results of the German attack on Poland, Hitler said:

"I am not in the fortunate position of the Soviet state. Nevertheless, Germany's position must be solved."

"It is not an easy thing to say, but I cannot be silent. It can be done because I must be done."

"Germany must live. It must live. It must live. It must live."

Earlier, before the Nazi Youth Staff, Hitler said: "I have not been here for a long time, but I have been here for a long time."

"Germany will triumph over Russia if the hour ever comes when soldiers of the two nations face each other again in battle."

"Let him carry his sword," the Führer said, "and let him carry his sword."

JESUIT Paid Last TRIBUTE

FR. CORRIGAN
RITES HELD

Dignitaries of the Church, leaders in city, state and civic life, students and alumni of Catholic colleges, and thousands of bereaved persons from all walks of life who knew and loved him, paid their respects today to the Rev. James J. Corrigan, S. J., of a requiem high mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

On the sidewalks outside, their heads bowed toward the candlelit altar before which the casket stood, some 500 men, women and children, knelt and prayed.

Rites of black-lacquered members of the Society of Jesus flanked the simple coffin, marking the office of the dead.

In the sanctuary Cardinal O'Connell sat, accompanied by Monsignor Michael J. Spillane, and Joseph J. McGinley.

Assistance was read by the Cardinal, assisted by Mr. Daniel J. Sweeney, crucifer.

Reverend Louis J. Gallagher, president of Boston College, sang the requiem high mass.

Rev. John R. Cross, S. J., of Boston College, presided at the altar, which preceded the requiem mass a half-hour.

Chanters were John Daley, S. J., and Gerald Deane, S. J.

Among those present, prominent in civic and social life, were Governor James M. Curley, accompanied by Adjutant-General William R. Dwyer, John E. Scott, Representative Thomas A. Dwyer, and Dennis Donnelly, Mayor of Boston.

Also present were Rev. John J. Corrigan, S. J., of Boston College, and Rev. John J. Corrigan, S. J., of Boston College.

Death Misses Out by a Foot at Richman Takeoff

Disaster loomed as the Harry Richman plane took off at Llandudno in Wales for the London. A sound camera truck drove in the path of the plane. Pilot Dick Merrill had only one choice: to take off and raise the right wing. Here the wing tip is about to clear photograph, by a foot.

Jewish Congress

U. S. Played Major Role at Geneva

This the result in a series of steps which by prominent Bostonians in "What the Jewish World Congress Means to You."

By ELIUD D. STONE
Former Assistant U. S. Minister, National Vice-President Zionist Organization of America, who had the distinction of being elected in his absence as a member of the Council of the World Jewish Congress at Geneva, President Temple Mishkin Telia.

The recent World Jewish Congress held at Geneva is, indeed, an event of universal interest. It constitutes the first attempt to assemble together the representatives of the remnants of Israel for the purpose of taking counsel with one another relative to their common problems.

It is noteworthy that the World Jewish Congress met at Geneva at a most critical and decisive period in the history of mankind.

One thousand and two hundred delegates of Jewish life, from all over the world, gathered in the Swiss town of Geneva, Switzerland, to discuss the problems of the Jewish people. The delegates, who came from all over the world, were in the city of Geneva, Switzerland, to discuss the problems of the Jewish people. PREVIEW OF MOVIES IN THE MAKING

WRITER TOURS FILM CAPITAL'S SOUND STAGES

By Hollywood Correspondent Boston Evening American

Hollywood, Sept. 12.—They get bored with beauty out here—they say. On the sound stage where "Gold Diggers of 1937" is being made at Warner, one of the "juicers" (electricians) was grumbling.

In the foreground were 40 or 50 gorgeous girls in lively garb—glittering frocks. In the background, a score or so others were rumbling about in a green-lit pool. They were very abbreviated gymnastics.

One who knows there is such a thing as getting sick and tired of seeing nothing but good-looking women? "Friend the juicer" complained. "It's too much! That's one reason I wear these green-lit glasses. I'm tired of 'em. I hope my next picture is a western with a lot of horses to look at."

But the director who is directing the dance of the film here is not. He knows. He is the old movie theater director of the musical comedy that once inspired the juicers.

Only a Pose

The electricity was still humming and the juicer was still grumbling. "It's no attention to him," the director said. "This is his fourth 'Gold Diggers' and you'll find him in the next one and the one after that. He's a real juicer. He has probably a dozen phone calls in his back right now."

At that, if one were of a mind to complete a beauty, there is little chance of it. He is in the "Gold Diggers" company.

30 Comics in Advertiser

Attention youngsters! Attention grownups! Tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser will carry a new 30-page enlarged section which promises thrills galore. Here we see members of "Yule Pastiche" company at the BKO Boston looking over the new comic section.

and urging federal regulation of coal.

Apparently he convinced the President, and a new bill was framed, embodying the Lewis law, federal control.

Meanwhile, Mr. Sidney Hillman and others had been working hard, urging a broader measure which would provide for the regulation of all industries.

Before the Lewis coal measure could be introduced, Senator Wagner had presented the National Recovery Administration bill in the Senate, and under the whip of the White House it was rushed through a bewildered Congress.

Mr. Lewis, Mr. Hillman and other kindred souls were placed on the administrative board, and the nation found itself embroiled on the disastrous National Recovery Administration experiment.

John L. Lewis, the National Recovery Administration. Lewis presented his long-awaited opportunity to get into the political big time.

With that intuitive sense which has always been his greatest asset, Lewis recognized immediately that the National Recovery Administration was a disaster.

tion, the quick trigger Lewis was able to present the accomplished fact of an almost 100 per cent organized industry.

IN 1934, he branched out into politics. Although he had supported every Republican presidential candidate since 1928, going so far in the Coolidge campaign as to be the whole staff of U. M. W. A. organizer into Republican campaign workers, he now became a serious contender for the nomination.

In the newly organized coal districts he gave Mr. Roosevelt an amazing demonstration of his power to deliver the mine vote.

In the two Republican states of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, he easily defeated strong Republican incumbent senators, and swept the Democratic state ticket into office, as well.

In Ohio and Indiana, he undoubtedly contributed heavily to the Democratic majority.

After 1934, Lewis was in the Administration strategists that Lewis was implicitly indispensable to the New Deal.

When the Supreme Court annulled the National Recovery Administration, Mr. Lewis could not get out of the Administration. THEY which was signed out of the Administration, Mr. Lewis could not get out of the Administration.

During the last two years of the present administration, Lewis has been a lightning rod for lightning rods.

Crack of Doom

Barber Lives a Whole Lifetime In One Second

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Now this is the story of a close shave—the closest shave John Pismo of Clifton, N. J., ever saw in his life. If I'd said it was the closest shave I had ever seen—well—that might not mean anything at all.

But when Johnny Pismo says it, he speaks with the authority of a man who has been seeing close shaves all his life—and giving them.

You see, Johnny is a barber. Johnny has been a barber for the last 17 years, but he says he'd never had anything exciting happen in his shop until the summer of 1934.

And how came Johnny waiting until now to tell us that story? Well—you see, Johnny was just a bit skeptical about us. Here's how he explains it:

"My wife," he says, "has been having your paper ever since we were married, but neither one of us ever believed in extras. We thought they were all faked. Then, my wife tried me and won a prize, so we had to change our minds. Now she wants me to try my luck in your department."

Well, Johnny, for late than never. This department awards you ten bucks and the degree of Distinguished Adventurer. But remember, it doesn't pay to be skeptical. If you want the yarn in right view, you'd have been drawing interest on that very day.

And now let's take a look at Johnny's yarn. He says it wasn't as terrifying as some of the stories he's seen printed in this column, because it happened so fast and was all over so soon. But just the same it was a real white, it lasted, and it left Johnny in such a state of jitter that he didn't want to do any work for the rest of the day.

Johnny's shop has a front and a back door—the back one leading to a bathroom that is no longer used. That back door, Johnny says, is always kept closed in winter, but in the summer when it's warm he opens it to give the breeze a chance to circulate.

Johnny used to keep that back door open all summer long during business hours. Nowadays, though, there are times when he keeps it closed. The minute more than two small clouds appear in the sky together, Johnny shuts it—and it takes a darned good customer to talk him into opening it up again.

Johnny's wife is a little bit afraid of lightning. She had often told him about that time—five-and-a-half years ago—a dark, and that he ought to keep the back door closed whenever it began to thunder.

Johnny never paid any attention to her. If he had—well, he'd never be telling this yarn to us today. And take my word for it, it's the damndest thing that ever happened to any barber who sits down at the barber's.

It was morning in the afternoon, and the sky was cloudy. There was some rain in the air, but Johnny and his wife, and there were some customers sitting down in a game of checkers until the sun cleared and the customers came out of their skins again. Thanks was coming on the dinner and dining tables with every minute.

It started to rain, and just as it did a rain came in. He sat down in the first chair and ordered a shave. So Johnny forgot about the checkers he was working up a later in the afternoon.

Before the sun had begun to warm up, the storm broke. The rain came down in sheets, and the thunder, which had been a distant rumble before, now sounded like the report of a machine gun going off right alongside your ear. But that didn't bother Johnny.

His wife might be afraid of lightning, but he wasn't. He scooped up a big wad of hair on the brush and began rubbing it over his customer's face.

He spread the latter and rubbed it in. His helper was standing at the window, still watching the water collect in the gutters. There was another crack of thunder—louder and closer than any that had come before. Importantly, Johnny finished lather, lit the soap in the chair and picked up his sharpest razor.

Johnny pruned the soap—forgot it down as his customer's face for the first time, sweeping stroke. Then, in the next second, everything in the world happened.

Johnny felt a sudden, strange sensation in his right arm. A bright light flashed momentarily, but as it died out a bit, he could see what had caused it.

A shower of golden, brilliant sparks coming out of the END OF HIS RAZOR.

The next thing Johnny knew, the razor was wrenching from his hand. It fell clattering to the floor. Johnny looked down at his customer. He lay in the chair rigid—stiff—and totally unconscious.

And Johnny stood beside him, his face white, his whole body shaking—feeling as if he'd hit a live wire.

He stood trembling until his helper came and led him to a chair. Then he sat, dazed, while the helper soaked a towel in cold water and applied it to the face of the man in the chair.

In a few minutes the customer opened his eyes. He looked around the shop, and then at Johnny sitting in the chair. He sort of looked as if he expected Johnny to finish shaving him—but not for Johnny.

For all the rest of that day he couldn't hold a razor in his hand. His helper finished the job he had started.

Now, whenever the sky begins to wind up, Johnny shuts that back door. And one of the things he and his wife agree most closely on is that little matter of lightning.

Lightning may never strike twice in the same place, but one hair will strike twice, right in your old paragon's, if you'll send me a good TRILL adventure yarn that I can publish in this column. Take a class in it.

Monday, Editor of the Boston Evening American, a thrilling yarn called "The Baby's Ghost."

Joan Crawford at Best In Historic Role

An entirely new and different Juan Crawford makes her appearance in "The Gorgeous Hussy," now on the screens of the Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

By MARION FRENCH
 "Stage Struck," new Warner Brothers musical film, and a nifty stage show starring John Steel, famous tenor, make a very entertaining bill at the Metropolitan Theater this week.

Dick Powell as "Stage Struck" which are pretty far fetched from their present real status, and the "Stage Struck" is a wood's dream, recently re-created as a stage play. The youthfulness of the young man, who is a romantic Mr. Powell is a good thing, and the stage direction is a good thing, while the happy blonde, who is a stage actress, is a good thing.

an actress who has been known to take a shot or two at an over-the-hill husband or at least one occasion, she and Mr. Randall (Dick's screen name) don't get along at all until Warren William, who plays the part of the producer of the show John is backing, tells her that, according to Dr. Freud, the only cure is secrecy in love with Power.

Miss Blondell makes a terrific play for Powell when she learns that hate is really love, or at least 300,000 times as able to cure.

GAYETY—"Brilliant Marriage"

Jeanne Madden, a sweet-looking youngster who makes her debut in "The Girl on the Train". The dance director does his best to discourage Miss Madden from becoming a show girl, but she is determined to make her money by flashing a smile at a "hunny" leading man. In the end, Powell is glad that she has come to the ground to take him in the pants when the jitter bugs amuck andoints Jeanne's benefactor. The actress is an angel in the role of the "hunny" actor's role, so everything works out all right.

The songs and dance numbers on "Stage Struck" are especially nice. Some of the best of the tunes are, "Fancy Meeting You" and "In Your Own Quiet Way."

BROOKS HAS
1 TEAMS

Medford High school's basketball prospects for the coming season are nothing less than bleak and for the most part very good reason—a serious lack of experienced material.

New Deal Administration Plays With Labor

REVELATION of a confidential memorandum in American Federation of Labor files strengthens the general belief that New Deal interests have ENCOURAGED DISRUPTION OF THE AMERICAN LABOR MOVEMENT as it is now organized.

The memorandum reveals Secretary of Labor Perkins as supporting John L. Lewis, leader of the faction in revolt against the Federation, over William A. Green, president of the Federation.

It reads in part: "Miss Perkins laid great stress on Lewis' superior leadership over that of Green, but she did not want Green to learn of her activity in behalf of Lewis, as she felt it would divide labor's vote for Roosevelt."

The opinion has long prevailed that the rebellion of the Lewis unions had DEFINITE NEW DEAL SANCTION.

It is hardly possible, otherwise, that a group so thoroughly in sympathy with and controlled by the Administration, could have proceeded so far.

The implication is clearly drawn that, with the election safely out of the way, THE NEW DEAL IS PREPARED TO THROW OFF ITS MASK and openly champion the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization in its struggle with President Green and the American Federation of Labor.

Present Tense in Kansas

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, the New Deal orators and the Secretary of the Treasury know only the "budget" in the past and future tenses.

For nearly four years the taxpayers of the country have listened to these songs:

The budget WILL BE balanced.
The budget MAY BE balanced.
The budget WAS balanced.
The budget OUGHT TO BE balanced.
The budget IS GOING TO BE balanced.
But the taxpayer, who exists in the inexorable present tense, has never heard this:

The budget IS balanced.

There is no present tense in this Administration.

It achieved power in 1932 by a gamble in FUTURES.

It hopes to retain power by further gambles in futures—one of which, paradoxically, IS A PROMISED RISE OF $1,000,000,000 IN THE DEFICIT FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1936-37, made by President Roosevelt—EXPERT IN PAST AND FUTURE TENSES—in his statement of August 31 to the country.

In Kansas, however, under the stewardship of Governor Landon, the budget IS balanced.

Father Corrigan, Noted Priest

IN THE DEATH, Wednesday, of the Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of social ethics at Boston College, Massachusetts loses a leader and the Catholic Church a faithful son.

For years, in the pulpit, public platform and over the radio, Father Corrigan was a forceful opponent of Communism, divorce, birth control and American participation in European affairs.

Father Corrigan served well, and his memory will find an immortality in the hearts of the thousands that knew and loved him.

Death in a Baby Hand

"You ask yourself, 'Can these things be?' The picture gives you the answer. These things can be; nothing is too atrocious in the madness of Communism."

You see a San Sebastian mother and her chubby baby son. In the baby's hand is a powerful automatic pistol, leveled straight ahead to kill. The mother, you note, bends proudly.

You wonder, "Endowed with such a heritage of hate, what will be the attitude of this child, or thousands like him in Spain, towards peace and good will when he reaches man's estate?"

And, wondering, you think, "Could my baby who plays with dolls and rattles now be taught to hold a gun in his hand and shoot to kill?"

Spanish mothers probably asked that same question—before Communism. They no longer ask, they know.

How Many of Us DESERVE to Get a Break?

"THIS IS DISCOURAGING
I NEVER GOT A BREAK"

"Discontent is want of self-realization; it is inferiority of will."—Emerson.

THAT'S how a sensible country doctor would diagnose the ailment of the wandering, wailing young man in the picture above, scuffling his toes in the dust, leaving unfinished jobs behind him, moaning about his "tough luck" because better jobs are not handed to him on a silver platter.

You've heard hundreds of people, young and old, grumbling about "I never get a break."

That universal complaint is true. Nobody ever "gets" a break. Men must create the "breaks" for themselves or they don't get any.

If you saw a man standing helpless in front of a wall, complaining that he couldn't find a "break," you would yell at him:

"For Pete's sake, don't just stand there; if you want to get through that wall, BREAK THROUGH."

Before the young man above, wandering aimlessly down the road to Nowhere, wails any more about never "never getting a break," he should answer this question honestly: "Do I DESERVE a break?"

When the savage Tartar tribes that overran China came to the Great Wall, they did not sit down and shed tears because they could not "get a break"; they made the break that they wanted, tearing through the wall or charging over the top.

Spineless men pace up and down outside their boss' door, afraid to go in and ask for a raise, knowing that they don't really deserve a raise, then go home to ruin the evening for their wives by moaning that "they never get a break."

"Why, Mary, I've been with the Company for ten years, and younger men keep coming in and the Boss shows them up ahead of me. Looks like I'll never get a break." How many wives have had to listen to that, women that know why their husbands "never get a break?"

Your young men who devote all their spare time and much of their "working" time to studying the dope on horse races, or the father of a family who sinks his savings in lottery tickets, hoping to bribe fortune into dropping a "break" into their idle hands—those people seldom get a break and never deserve it.

This young man in the picture above is waiting for someone to do for him that which he should do for himself.

We can't depend on "Lucky Luck" or somebody else to provide us with our opportunities; we must make our own opportunities.

The Human Side of the News
By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARTS METROPHONE NEWS

The human side of the news is the most interesting and the most important. It is the side that makes the news human and that makes it worth reading.

The human side of the news is the side that makes the news human and that makes it worth reading. It is the side that makes the news human and that makes it worth reading.

The human side of the news is the side that makes the news human and that makes it worth reading. It is the side that makes the news human and that makes it worth reading.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

The man lay dead.

Yet relief and joyous his living words defied death, death, death, death.

Sometimes a woman's "yes" gives a man a real thrill—particularly when his question was "will you give me a divorce?"

Don't take too much stock in romantic love, says Helen Rowland, it seldom pays the dividends promised in the wedding certificate.

A man who would "kiss and tell" need to be regarded as a fool, but nowadays a girl would sometimes feel flattered if a man recovered "kiss" long enough to brag about it.

Ever since Adam found that it worked, blaming a woman has been the first step in the process of "being a man."

When a nice young man suddenly begins acting self-important, dignified and important, you can safely guess he is trying to live up to some girl's opinion of him.

When we see the younger set crowding six or seven into a poor, helpless little radiator and stepping on the gas, we sometimes feel that there ought to be a law against cruelty to automobiles.

A blow to a woman's vanity may be painful, but not serious; because it is usually the last thing about her to die, and nothing but a few long years of matrimony can kill it.

A man's idea of a hat are as fixed as the stars; but if it is a G.I.F. hat, he will wear it to a funeral or a cruller is a "hat" to a woman.
